Ligaments Main article: Linking a ligament is a small range of dense, white and fibrous electrical fabric [6]. Ligaments connect the ends of the bones to form a gasket. Consulted on January 8, 2009 â† 'Jonathan, Cluett (2008). The muscle-skeletal system refers to the system that has its muscles linked to an internal skeletal system and is necessary for humans to move to a more favorable position. It is a complex structure with two distinct divisions; The axial skeleton, which includes the vertebral spine, and the appendicular skeleton [6]. FUNCTION The skeletal system serves as a structure for tissues and horses to connect. Pmidan, 18259783. ^ a B Kahn, Cynthia; Scott Line (in English). Archived from the original on June 3, 2010. Ligaments also prevent certain directional movements [13]. Bursae Main article: Bursa (anatomy) A bursa is a small bag full of fluid of white fibrous tissue and lined with synovial membrane.
